Employment Opportunities:

Our three-semester Pre-service Firefighter program is designed to give you the confidence and skills needed to pursue an exciting firefighting career. Many colleges now provide NFPA certifications, so what makes Seneca's program different? We believe there is much more to the hiring process than just NFPA certifications and Seneca delivers a program that will ensure that you are fully prepared to enter the workplace. In addition to receiving NFPA certifications, you will participate in comprehensive fitness classes*, mock written and practical employment exams, and attend individual interview sessions that are recorded and critiqued in order for you to be familiar with the hiring techniques currently used by fire services. Seneca's medical training is second to none, with experienced instructors teaching the Red Cross Emergency Medical Responder* (EMR) program. An optional DZ license* course is offered to ensure that graduating students have all the qualifications necessary to immediately start the fire services application process. We are very proud of the Seneca College Pre-Service program and we look forward helping you realize your goal of becoming a firefighter. *EMR certification, DZ license, and a fitness certificate are required by many fire services as part of the application process.
